

SO YOU SAY YOUR KINK IS NOT POLITICAL

...but you practice shibari, a practice that derives from Hojojutsu, a technique used by the police to capture, interrogate and torture people

...but you like to be the Master to a slave and play with power hierarchies and labels that are drenched in thousands of years of suffering and death

...but you use floggers, whips & canes, all of them implements that were and still are traditionally used to punish and dehumanize prisoners, slaves etc.

...but „real“ kinbaku needs to come with tatamis and yukatas else it's not „Eastern“

...but you love your sissification so you can play out traditional roles that women had to endure and suffer through for hundreds of years

...but it's hot to do some race play, nazi play and engage in traditional 1950's household play

This poster is not about kink-shaming. It's calling on you to reflect on the fact that kink does not exist in a vacuum. It's a privilege to consensually play with these topics instead of being caught in them without consent. It cannot be separated from politics, history and lived experiences.

Practicing kink is political.
At worst it re-enacts, at best it deconstructs.
